RECREATION CENTER

INTERESTING CONFERENCE IS HELD AT THIRD STREET
SCHOOL

A most interesting conference was held last night in the library of the Third Street school, when a number of earnest men and women met together to discuss a civic recreation center campaign. This was the second meeting called by Mrs. Hutchinson, president of the P. T. A. Federation, to consider this all-important subject. Mr. Sims, assistant superintendent of the L. A. Playground Commission, was present and gave a very stimulating and inspiring talk on Civic Recreation Centers. Mr. Sims, who has had many years of experience in similar work in Chicago, described briefly the general equipment of successful centers, and mentioned that the city of Chicago had spent ten million dollars upon playgrounds and recreation centers. The influence of recreation centers cannot be weighed in avoirdupois, it partakes of psychic and spiritual effects which can not be computed in dollars and cents. Wherever recreation centers have been established the tough dance hall, the undesirable pool room, have been forced to close. Pool rooms truly are of the devil—but what is wrong with the game of pool? Nothing. All forms of amusements and recreations, properly organized and under trained supervision have proven the moral safeguard of the community. Playgrounds have revolutionized the morals of thousands of young people.

People, young as well as old, will flock where there is light and warmth and brightness. Where do the young people of Glendale go for their amusements and recreation? The work of the civic recreation center is the most dynamic force of the age.

From an economic standpoint a Glendale civic recreation center would be invaluable. Every time a Glendale resident goes into Los Angeles for any form of recreation, so much money is taken out of Glendale. Carfare, dance and lecture, and theater tickets—hundreds of people stream from Glendale to Los Angeles every day, spending their money and time outside of their own city.

Big boys must have comradeship; men must meet men. Why not all forces co-operate to make a suitable meeting place and recreation center in Glendale? Mr. Sims described vividly the ideal center where mother, father, big brother and sister, and the smaller children of the family could all find their wholesome amusements and recreations in the municipal clubhouse.

After this extremely interesting talk, to which a written report can not give adequate justice, Mr. Sims was asked many questions and an animated discussion ensued, reflecting all shades of civic and personal ideas. One of the most impressive statements was made by Clarence Edwards, a young man who has grown up from boyhood in Glendale, and who related the many futile attempts made by local young men to obtain any place where they could enjoy reasonable recreation. To his personal knowledge these young men from year to year, were forced to find their amusements in Los Angeles, where, freed from proper restraint, and surrounded by improper influences, many of them fell into the mire; some of them straightened up, some never recovered their hold on the wholesome things of life. It is impossible to report the many interesting remarks, some of them, quite lengthy, made by eighteen different people; but mention must be made of a very effective poem read by Mrs. Ella Richardson, entitled, "The Kid on the Corner."

At 11:15 p. m. a motion was unanimously carried: "That the workers go ahead with the campaign of educating the residents of Glendale to a sense of the need of a Civic Recreation Center, leaving aside all personal issues." This resolution was carried without a dissenting voice, and was followed by a motion that the meeting be adjourned subject to the call of the program committee.

It was announced that the program committee are making preparations for several interesting public and mass meetings to be held during January. The Glendale Garden Society, as part of its contribution to the civic welfare movement, has arranged a great public meeting for the evening of the first Thursday in February when Mr. Riatt, superintendent of the Los Angeles Playground and Civic Recreation Center Commission, will present a stereopticon lecture on this subject.

Mrs. Hutchinson suggested that

DR. FOX SPEAKS

ADDRESSES LARGE ASSEMBLY
AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The brilliant lecturer, Dr. D. F. Fox, addressed a large assemblage last night at the First Congregational church on "How I Made a Fortune." His lecture was replete with wit and wisdom and furnished much food for thought. He emphasized the fact that all things in the moral, spiritual and intellectual world are ours if we take them; that as we enlarge our mental horizon and improve our mental atmosphere we are able to reach out and enjoy all the good things in the universe. He spoke of the great improvements wrought by science and invention that have been brought within the reach of the humblest. We make our fortune by making use of all the good things that are at our command by being receptive of all the beauty, art, music, and wonderful riches of life. Mr. A. Lowinsky, whose splendid ability as a violinist needs no mention in Glendale, played several selections, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Lowinsky.

ALUMNI

The Alumni Association of the Glendale High School is not asleep by any means. The executive committee has been very active of late, and is said to have several brilliant plans up its sleeve.

One of these is a Vodevil Show to be held January 18 at the Palace Grand theater. Excellent local and professional talent promises to make this one of the biggest successes ever staged by the association.

Both citizens and students should be quick to fall in line as boosters for this show, the purpose of which is to enlarge the scholarship loan fund. The Alumni have undertaken a great work.

Jim Henry Ilse, president of the alumni has announced the annual Christmas function of the association which will be a formal dance. Preparations are already being made for this affair, which is to come off Saturday at the Masonic Temple.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

A happy company of twenty-four little friends gathered at the home of Miss Geraldine Meagher of Tenth street on Saturday afternoon to help make the tenth birthday of this dear little girl one long to be remembered. The home was beautifully adorned in the Christmas colors for the occasion. The dining room where a large table was spread with dainties for the guests was a bower of Christmas illuminations. The Christmas tree was heavily laden with beautiful gifts from Geraldine's loving little friends. Assisting Mrs. Meagher to entertain the guests were Miss Dorothy Carmack, Miss Helen Huton, Miss Grace Lewis and Miss Florence Crane.

WORTH-WHILE GIFTS

The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company are making handsome Christmas gifts to their employees according to Fred Deal, manager of the local exchange. All employees who have been two years or more in service will receive a check for three weeks' pay. All who have been in service one year or more will receive a check to the amount of two weeks' pay.

RETURNED

This is the time of year when college students are returning to spend the holidays at home. Among these are Miss Rebecca Gregg, who arrived from Berkeley Sunday accompanied by her father D. L. Gregg. Despite the fact that Miss Gregg is very much in love with her work at the university she was more than glad to get back among her many friends in Glendale. She has a great deal to tell about the troubles of a Frosh.

the campaign slogan should be—Educate and Agitate, to the end that the voters of Glendale be ready to vote bonds for this issue when the right time shall arrive.

Amongst those present were Arthur G. Lindley, J. Beldin, Prof. Oliver, W. F. Tower, Mr. and Mrs. Richardson White, Dr. Harrower, Mrs. Ella Richardson, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Edmonds, Mr. Newton, J. Campbell, J. Wilson, Rev. Mr. Cowser, Clarence Edwards, Mrs. H. C. Ackley, Mrs. Hutchinson, Mrs. Nanno Woods.

A formal note to this effect will be sent to Germany soon through the United States. Lloyd-George said England endorses the Russian and French rejection of peace and characterized Germany's offer as "a noose which the Allies are asked to place around their necks." He declared that the Allies will demand complete restoration, full reparation and an effectual guarantee for the future. Lloyd-George's speech was wildly cheered.

INTEREST IN LLOYD-GEORGE'S SPEECH

GOLDEN WEDDING

MR. AND MRS. A. H. DONECKEN
CELEBRATE FIFTIETH AN-NIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Donecken of 205 Tropico avenue, Tropico, were the honored guests at a dinner party on Sunday evening, December 16. Mr. and Mrs. Donecken were married December 16, 1866 in Nebraska and this affair was in celebration of their golden wedding anniversary and was held at the home of their son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Donecken. The close of fifty years of loving companionship, sharing each other's joys and sorrows was a fitting occasion for the happy celebration. Decorations of yellow suggested the golden milestone which the happy bride and groom had just reached. An elaborate dinner was served. Those who enjoyed the occasion besides the host and hostess and the appointed guests were Mr. John Henry and Mr. and Mrs. Will Henry of Los Angeles and Mrs. Jessie Lynn of Tropico, the latter a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Donecken.

NEW LIGHT ON OLD CALIFORNIA

Noble as was the work of Father Junipero Serra, tradition errs in giving him credit for planning the settlement of California by the Spaniards—according to Herbert Ingram Priestley, assistant curator of the Bancroft Library of Pacific Coast History of the University of California, in an important volume just issued by the University in its Publications in History.

The glory of achieving the settlement of California Mr. Priestley ascribes to Jose de Galvez, visitor-general of New Spain from 1765 to 1771. The romantic story of the rise of this Spanish shepherd-boy to become minister of the Indies and a marquis in the peerage of Castile richly deserves a place in the common stock of American historical tradition.

In 1765, Galvez was made an honorary member of the Council of the Indies and sent as visitor-general, to New Spain, which meant the vast region from Panama to Santa Fe and from Louisiana to the Pacific Coast. Alarming reports were coming in that the Russians, already in possession of Alaska, were trying to spread their possessions southward down the Pacific Coast. It was agreed that Galvez should go to Lower California and arrange for founding new missions and new Indian towns. First establishing a naval base at San Blas, on the Mexican mainland, Galvez decided on a voyage to San Diego and Monterey by sea, and the sending of a land expedition to take possession of Monterey and build a presidio there. It took him forty days to make the 400-mile sea journey from San Blas to Lower California, and his companions three months.

Galvez found that the military management by Gaspar de Portola's soldiers had caused the Lower California missions to suffer, and he restored management of their affairs to Father Junipero Serra. When Galvez proposed the establishment of missions in Upper California, the College of San Fernando, which had charge of the California missions, was bitterly opposed to the plan of establishing so many new missions and at such remote distance, but Father Serra himself was an enthusiastic supporter of the plan which Galvez proposed.

The attempt to colonize the Californias was full of heroic difficulties. During the hundred and fifty thousand years after the time of Cortez, a score or more of attempts to colonize Lower California had resulted in nothing, largely because they had depended primarily on the hope of quick riches from mines and pearls. But Galvez brought about civil colonization and the establishment of permanent agricultural and stock-raising communities. His hopes for large productive revenues from Lower California were disappointed, but his work resulted in the permanent occupation of Upper California.

THE SPIRIT OR CHRISTMAS

Blossom and bird and leaf went long ago,
And all the little nests are heaped with snow.
Out in the storm the barren boughs are hurled,
And yet a hidden glory lights the gloom—
The wind of His sweet spirit stirs the world
And blows the garden of the heart to bloom.
—Edwin Markham.

CHRISTMAS STORY HOUR

MRS. DANFORD WILL ENTER-
TAIN CHILDREN AT CITY
LIBRARY

Throughout the summer for the past few years, the children of Glendale, little tots of four and five up to eight and ten years of age have found the library story hour the happiest time of the week. Mrs. Danford, librarian, began this innovation at the old library on Glendale avenue when the accommodations were very crude and where she could not carry out all her ideas. With the opening of the new library a few years ago the story hour was made a feature of the library work and even the large room assigned to the children in the new building was filled with an eager little company on Wednesday morning during the summer months when Mrs. Danford would entertain and instruct them or have some one present give the children a talk along some line of art or nature study, music or literature. The fundamental purpose of the story hour is to foster in the mind of the child a love for good books and to teach him to use the library catalogue intelligently. As a result of the story hour the librarians have found a much greater demand for the books that are helpful to the children now and will continue to be invaluable to them as they grow up. It is so easy to inspire in a child a love for good books but when once a boy or girl has acquired a taste for the kind of literature that is questionable it is difficult to correct their tastes. The library story hour aims to instill a love for the best into the mind of the smallest children where it will gradually grow and develop.

In spite of the many activities of holiday week Mrs. Danford has planned a Christmas story hour for the children. On Saturday morning children of twelve years and younger are invited to the library where they will enjoy the beautiful Christmas stories. 9 o'clock is the hour.

WIRELESS CLUB FORMED

Last Saturday at the home of Hubert Woods, 1222 Milford St., was held a very interesting meeting, at which was formed a club of those interested in the subject of wireless telegraphy. The organization was given the name of the "Glendale Radio Club." The following officers were elected: President, Hubert Woods; recording secretary, Daniel Campbell; corresponding secretary, Jason Kilgore; treasurer, Ronald Greenwalt.

The purpose of the club is to advance wireless telegraphy by making each member's set as efficient as possible, also to enforce the United States laws regarding wireless communications. Dues were fixed at 10 cents per month; with this it will be able to procure books and magazines on the subject of wireless. These books, etc., will be for the free use of all members.

There are at present about 25 amateurs in Glendale who have sets, some fairly proficient and some not so. The less proficient members will receive instruction in sending and receiving, probably by one of the members, by joining the club. The next meeting has been arranged for next Saturday evening at the home of Hubert Woods, 1222 Milford St., at 7:30 o'clock. All interested are invited to be present and join the club.

Next Saturday morning at 8:30 a. m. a club message will be sent from radio station 6 A D A and all who have sets and can read at least eight words per minute should be listening in at that hour. All announcements regarding the club activities will be made by wireless at predetermined times. We believe that this club will be a success if all amateurs will get behind and push. Information can be obtained from any officer of the club by wireless or otherwise.

Among those present Saturday were:

Jason Kilgore (licensed operator) 6 J K.
Harold Duey (licensed operator) 6 U T.
Leslie McReynolds (licensed operator) 6 U T.
Harold Scott.
Dan Campbell (licensed operator) 6 M G.
Tracy Claver.
Chester Weaver.

AVOID ALL CHANCE OF ACCIDENTS

What an ideal world this would be if there were no accidents, no errors, no half doing of tasks. While it would seem impossible to avoid accidents entirely, yet the number of accidents could be greatly reduced if people would observe common-sense rules when engaged in activities of life.

The man who falls on a slippery pavement is to a degree careless. When he steps upon the pavement he is undoubtedly aware that it is slippery and he therefore should be very careful. The child, on account of inexperience, meets with many accidents which on account of carefulness are avoided by adults. Accidents are the result of shortsightedness on the part of persons who meet with them.

It is important that boys and girls should early in life learn to do things systematically and use forethought in connection with all activities. The wagon that is substantially built and all bolts and mortises securely fastened will not break down unless it is overloaded. A competent and honest workman will see to it that the wagon is substantially built, and a careful owner will require the wagon to be kept in good repair, and will not allow it to be overloaded.

The automobile, which is in such general use, must be well built, and then it must be kept in proper repair and driven carefully. A poorly built machine is apt to give its user trouble, and a reckless driver will make trouble for everybody who comes within his reach.

An important part of an education should be to learn how to avoid accidents. Every accident that happens has come about on account of somebody's carelessness. Never cross a railroad track without being sure that there is not a train approaching. Never run risks that are apt to lead to accidents. If everybody will use due caution there will be but few accidents.

WOMEN'S WORK

The meeting of the city W. C. T. U., held last Friday at the home of Mrs. Rebecca Lacy, 135 South Kenwood street, was of a very interesting nature. The appeal for hospital baby garments resulted in a shower of fifty or more garments for the unfortunate waifs of the county hospital. Mrs. Opal Greenwalt gave a very instructive drill on parliamentary law, bringing out many important points, helpful to the proper conducting of meetings. The special feature of the program was the account of the recent national convention, held in Indianapolis, Ind., which was given by the local officers representing the national officers, with a brief sketch of each. The former officers were all re-elected.

Mrs. Smart representing the national president, Miss Anna A. Gordon, showed pictures of the elegant Murat theater with a seating capacity of 2,000 where the convention was held, and the immense Claypool hotel, headquarters of officers and guests. This was the largest convention of the organization ever held, 900 delegates registering besides hundreds of visitors from outside the city, and the great building was taxed to its utmost to hold the people who attended. The convention was notable for big-brained orators who gave of their best. Hon. W. J. Bryan, Hon. J. Hanly, candidate for president on the prohibition ticket, Governor George A. Carlson of Colorado, and Congressman Richard P. Hobson gave eloquent addresses, and the women were not outdone. Mrs. Mary Harries of Georgia, Mrs. Ella A. Boole of New York, with scores of other "elect ladies," also representatives from China and Japan, added greatly to the enthusiasm of the occasion. From the opening song to the closing benediction, stupendous problems were dealt with. No speech, address or sermon suggested anything less than nation-wide prohibition. The masterpiece was given by the president, Miss Gordon, in her annual address, "The Challenge of a Big Task." Holding her audience spellbound she presented facts, history conditions and outlook in a most scholarly and inspiring way. Her address is a classic worthy of perusal by any one. Among other things she referred to the first and only other national convention ever held in Indianapolis, in its importance, as at that convention held in 1879 Frances E. Willard, who served the society for nineteen years as president, was elected; and showed some contrasts between now and then.

The organization was then but five years old, having organized work in seventeen states and a membership of 26,590. Now every state in the Union, the territories, and over 40 nations are working under the standard of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, with over half a million members. Then only three states, all in New England, were white for prohibition; now 23 states and Alaska are on the prohibition map. Nearly 90 per cent of Uncle Sam's domain is prohibition land. Miss Gordon called attention to a statement made by Miss Willard in 1889, "the present year has offered our society a splendid opportunity of furnishing practical proof that while we applaud every political movement that sounds the keynote of prohibition, we do this impartially." We are now partisan and must remain so. We are all making a supreme effort to secure a federal amendment for prohibition. State-wide prohibition victories have been secured only when people of all political faiths have united. We must continue along on the same omni-partisan lines. Space will not permit many splendid excerpts and the suggestive and helpful recommendations that might be given. Miss Gordon has been in the national work for thirty-nine years; first as Miss Willard's secretary, then as vice president to Mrs. Stephens, and for two years as president, and is a most able and efficient successor to those two noble women.

Mrs. Annie Frank spoke for the vice president, Mrs. Ella A. Boole, who is also the president of New York, the largest organized state, and has on her list the largest union, of over 600 members, in the convention. The state has 42,698 members, having gained 2,238 the past year. New York City alone has more saloons than 36 other states in the nation, making temperance work strenuous. Mrs. Boole is a splendid platform speaker of national reputation, traveled 25,000 miles, making a trip into Alaska and organized work there.

Mrs. Greenwalt represented the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Francis P. Parks, who resides at headquarters at Evanston. This is her eighth year in the office. She is the chief in the absence of the president. Her report shows that there are 792 field workers, lecturers and organizers, and that the gain in membership the past year is 18,818; that 16 states reached their full quota and received the prize pennant, "Goal reached in 1916," and that 12 states passed the 500 mark, receiving the recognition. Indiana carried off the star-gemmed Frances Willard banner awarded each year to the state making the largest gain in membership. Her gain was over 1100. Montana, one of the new dry states, gave her a close run. Mrs. Louise Morton naturally spoke of the recording secretary, Mrs. Elizabeth P. Anderson, who has filled the office most efficiently for many years and has also been president of North Dakota for seventeen years. She has been one of the strong pillars in maintaining prohibition in that state since it went dry in 1889. Her report of conditions in her state are most interesting and significant of the results of prohibition. The assistant recording secretary is Mrs. Sara H. Hoge of Virginia. Mrs. Jennie Mottern said of her that she is also president of Virginia, which has 7-378 members. Mrs. O. S. Palmer, treasurer, quoted from Mrs. Margaret C. Munn's report showing the receipts of the past year were $193,177.92.

NEW LIGHT ON DRAKE

A valuable collection of copies of Drake manuscripts has just been presented to the University of California for the Bancroft Library of Pacific Coast History by Mrs. Zelia Nuttall, the distinguished archaeologist and historian, who recently published in the Hakluyt Collection an important work entitled "New Light on Drake."

The documents presented by Mrs. Nuttall all relate to Drake's famous voyage of 1579, and are copied from the originals preserved in the Public Record Office in London. Three of them were published in Mrs. Nuttall's "New Light on Drake," the fourth, containing a detailed list of every gold and silver bar delivered by Drake to the Queen's Commissioners, has never been published in extenso, and may yield curious results if carefully studied by a mining expert. A study of Drake and the Tudor Navy by Corbett, who made use of these documents shows that in his raid up the Spanish-American coast Drake certainly made a rich haul.

This gift, and numerous others, show that scholars and collectors have come to regard the great Bancroft Library as the logical repository for all material relating to Western History.

Let us not forget that the real experience and life of a nation lies with the great multitude of unknown men. They constitute the body of the nation. This flag is the essence of their daily endeavors. This flag does not express any more than what they are and what they desire to be. . . . We look to the noisy places where men are talking in the market place; we look to where men are expressing their individual opinion; we look where partisans are expressing passion; instead of trying to attune our ears to that voiceless mass of men who merely go about their daily tasks, try to be honorable, try to serve the people they love, try to live worthy of the great communities to which they belong. These are the breath of the nation's nostrils; these are the sinew of its might.—President Wilson.

TO HAVE MADE US LAUGH WAS DICKENS' GREAT DEED

"I cannot read Dickens!" How many people make this confession, with a front of brass, and seem not to know," Andrew Lang says in one of his "Essays in Little," "how poor a figure they cut! George Eliot says that a difference of taste in jokes is a great cause of domestic discomfort. A difference in taste in books, when it is decided and vigorous, breaks many a possible friendship, and nips many a young liking in the bud. I would not willingly seem intolerant. A man may not like Sophocles, may speak disrespectfully of Virgil, and even sneer at Herodotus, and yet may be endured. But he or she (it is usually she) who contemns Scott, and 'cannot read Dickens,' is a person with whom I would fain have no further converse. If she be a lady, and if one meets her at dinner, she must of course be borne with, and 'suffered gladly.' But she has dug a gulf that nothing can bridge; she may be fair, clever and popular, but she is Anathema."

"But this admission does not mean," Mr. Lang continues, "that one is sealed of the tribe of Charles—that one is a Dickensite pure and simple, convinced and devout—any more than Mr. Matthew Arnold was a Wordsworthian. Dickens has many such worshipers, especially (and this is an argument in favor of the faith) among those who knew him in his life. He must have had wonderful charm; for his friends in life are his literary partisans, his uncompromising partisans, even to this day. They will have no half-hearted admiration, and scout him who tries to speak of Dickens as of an artist not flawless, no less than they scorn him who cannot read Dickens at all. At one time this honorable enthusiasm (as among the Wordsworthians) took the shape of 'endless imitation.' That is over; only here and there is an imitator of the master left in the land. All his own genius was needed to carry his mannerisms; the mannerisms without the genius were an armor that no devoted David had proved, that none could wear with success. "Of all great writers since Scott, Dickens is probably the man to whom the world owes most gratitude. . . . 'A vast hope has passed across the world,' says Alfred de Musset; we may say that with Dickens a happy smile, a joyous laugh, went round this earth. To make us laugh so frequently, so inextinguishably, so kindly—that is his great good deed. It will be said, and with a great deal of truth, that he has purged us with pity and terror as well as with laughter. But it is becoming plain that his command of tears is less assured than of old, and I cannot honestly regret that some of his pathos—not all, by any means—is losing its charm and the certainty of appeal. Dickens' humor was rarely too obvious; it was essentially personal, original, quaint, unexpected, and his own. His pathos was not infrequently derived from sources open to all the world, and capable of being drawn from by very commonplace writers. . . . Mrs. Beecher Stowe and the author of 'Misunderstood,' once made some people weep like anything by these simple means. Ouida can do it; plenty of people can do it. Dickens lives by virtue of what none but he can do; by virtue of Sairey Gamp, and Sam Weller, and Dick Swiveller, and Mr. Squeers, with a thousand other old friends, of whom we can never weary."

THE EVERLASTING ARMS

One of the sweetest messages in the Bible is this one: "Underneath are the everlasting arms." It is not often preached from; perhaps because it is felt to be so much richer and more touching than anything we ministers can say about it. But what a vivid idea it gives of the Divinity of resting in arms which fancy is of resting in arms which maternal love never allows to become weary. Sick room experiences arms are felt but not seen. The invisible secret support comes to the soul in its hours of weakness or trouble, for God knoweth our feebleness, he remembers that we are but dust.—Theodore L. Cuyleid, D. D.

A GARDEN ON EVERY LOT

"The essentials of a good garden are work, water and sun," said the suburbanite to his friend the doctor. "With those three things I can almost feed my family on one small lot."

"Why, those are the essentials of good health," replied the doctor. "If more office men spent their mornings and evenings in the open air there would not be so many corner drug stores."

"That is just the point," said the suburbanite. "I have just finished digging the third barrel of potatoes from a little square patch by the garage and I got all the benefits of golf, and the potatoes thrown in."

Many men in Southern California are thus combining pleasure with profit. In our wonderful climate all the year is planting time. With a fifty foot lot and a little work a man can raise all the fresh vegetables a large family can use. More than one housewife in Glendale has a cellar full of canned peas, string beans, to-matatoes and catsup.

What housewife would not welcome a garden with fresh beets, turnips, cabbage, cauliflower, kohlrabi, carrots, string beans, peppers, egg plant, tomatoes, onions, radishes and lettuce always ready. It's not a difficult undertaking. To true nature lovers it is a pleasure. Seed-men are always ready to offer suggestions, and many garden-helpers in pamphlet form are available.

And what is more beautiful than a garden? What would make for the civic beauty of Glendale more than a garden on every vacant lot? It would solve two problems, the weed problem and the high cost of living.

PERSISTENCE OR OBSTINACY

Sometimes what the observers call a foolish obstinacy is in reality persistence, and often what one denominates his persistence is nothing in the world but obstinacy. It is important to learn to distinguish the two, for obstinacy is always an obstacle in the way of success, while persistence is essential to it.

If you are sticking to your program, contrary to your neighbor's advice, just what is the reason for it? Is it because your faith in the ultimate outcome of your action has never wavered, because as you look ahead, you are sure that the future will vindicate the wisdom of your decision? If so, well and good. Whether you are right or wrong, believing as you do, you have no choice but to persevere.

But sometimes people continue in a line of action for reasons entirely different. Often what you try to make yourself believe is plucky persistence, rises from a reluctance to own that you are wrong. You are afraid that if you give up, people will laugh at you. You shrink from hearing the triumphant tones of your friends, "Oh, I told you so." You would rather go blundering on, knowing that each step takes you further from your ultimate goal, than acknowledge that you have been mistaken. If this is your case, you are not only obstinate, but cowardly as well.

It is not uncommon for people to continue in a course of action out of inertia. It is so much trouble to change. A young man entered a school of pharmacy, and at the end of the first six months, he became convinced that he had made a mistake. The work did not appeal to him. Indeed he found it unspeakably drudgery. He was not sufficiently interested to do good work, and yet if he gave up his course, it would be necessary to do something else, and make a new start in another direction. He shrank from the effort involved. He could not make up his mind as to what he wished to do, though it was so evident he had chosen wrongly. And so he continued his course, though common sense must have told him that he was sure to be a misfit, and a discontented man. He was both obstinate and foolish.

If you are sure you are right, then go ahead, no matter who discourages you. That magnificent self-confidence is characteristic of men who do big things. But if you know you are wrong, and yet will not change, either because you are too lazy to make the effort or too proud to acknowledge yourself in the wrong, instead of deserving credit for your persistence, you deserve censure and contempt for a weak, unreasonable obstinacy.—Young People's Weekly.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

A Groggy Champion
By James J. Montague
Twenty-three states out of the forty-eight have now declared for absolute prohibition.

John Barleycorn, my Jo John, you've got to taste defeat;
A million strong and husky men have thought they had you beat.
You've stood against the best of them, you've watched 'em jab and swing,
A thousand years and maybe more, and still you're in the ring.
While they are in the graveyards, John, in many a sodded row,
And still they haven't got you licked, John Barleycorn, my Jo.

John Barleycorn, my Jo John; Sing Sing and Joliet,
Are crowded to the iron roofs with fighting men you've met,
And men of sense an' brains, John, in many a hard fought bout,
Have done the best that men could do, but failed to put you out,
You've seen 'em rise and fall, John, you've seen 'em come and go,
And triumphed over all the lot, John Barleycorn, my Jo.

But times have changed a bit, John, they've got you going, lad,
You're getting wabbly on your feet, you've not the punch you had,
It looks to us outsiders, John, as if you'd had your fling.
When three and twenty sovereign states have barred you from the ring;
A wee bird seems to whisper, John, that you are going to blow,
Like all the other champs have done, John Barleycorn, my Jo.

THINGS TO FORGET

If you see a tall fellow ahead of a crowd,
A leader of men, marching fearless and proud,
And you know of a tale whose mere telling aloud,
Would cause his proud head to in anguish be bowed,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a skeleton hidden away,
In a closet, and guarded and kept from the day
In the dark; and whose showing, whose sudden display,
Would cause grief and sorrow and life-long dismay,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you think of a thing that will darken the joy
Of a man or a woman, a girl or a boy,
That will wipe out a smile, or the least way annoy
A fellow, or cause any gladness to cloy,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.
